

fermata

softly you speak
 low heat like half-notes operas sung in the bedsheets hum lullabies when you're gone crush me in sweeping crescendos of empty, then full again gripped and strung on your fingertips

held